Education and Training

The training requirements are designed to show you have attained a high level of training and experience that qualifies you to be recognized by FDOA as being uniquely qualified to teach in the various schools. FDOA recognizes there are variations in department policies regarding sending officers to training and an officer's ability and opportunity to seek higher education at a college or university. Courses such as Drug Investigations, Child Abuse Investigation, School Resource Officer Training, Instructor Techniques, Interviews and Interrogations are examples of courses that FDOA recognizes as being directly related to your duties as a D.A.R.E Officer. Other courses, college credits, or experience may be submitted for review and approval by the Practitioner Committee. It is the intent of the association to make the standards for certification high but reasonable and flexible.

Do you hold an Associate's Degree or have 60-semester hours credit from an accredited college or university? YES or NO
